Library Publishes Latest Report on Important Manuscript Acquisitions

The Library has just published a report discussing and listing recent additions to the vastly diverse collections of the Library's Manuscript Division.

Among the materials described in Library of Congress Acquisitions: Manuscript Division, 1985, is the W. Averell Harriman collection, with items from every stage of Harriman's career between 1900 and 1980. Included are candid impressions of Roosevelt, Churchill, Stalin, and others during almost all major Allied negotiating conferences which he attended as U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union from October 1943 to the end of the Second World War. There are also records of his service on Federal agencies promoting the cooperation of business and government in President Franklin D. Roosevelt's economic recovery program, his coordination of lend-lease to Britain in 1941, his leading of the committee which formulated the Marshall Plan, his work on the group that established the groundwork for the founding of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and his role as emissary between President Harry S Truman and General Douglas McArthur during the Korean War.

Also described in Library of Congress Acquisitions: Manuscript Division, 1985 are nine early letters of Walt Whitman, from his years on Long Island as a school teacher, 1836–41. These are particularly important because of the scarcity of documentary evidence concerning Whitman's early life.

Letters of Francis Scott Key form the centerpiece of the collection of Key, Cutts, and Turner families' papers presented to the Library in 1985 by Mrs. Richard M. Cutts. Also received by the Library were the papers of Patricia Roberts Harris, relating mainly to her Cabinet service in the Carter Administration as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development; Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare; and Secretary of Health and Human Services. These comprise some 195,000 items.

The Library's Sigmund Freud Collection and related psychoanalytic papers were also strengthened with the arrival from the estate of Anna Freud of the holograph manuscripts of more than a hundred of Freud's articles, books, and other contributions published between 1907 and 1956—available previously only on microfilm. Some 4,500 items from Anna Freud's own papers—chiefly production materials for her publications and addresses, 1937 to 1982—were also received. Contributions were also added to the papers of Abraham A. Brill and those of other members of the psychoanalytical movement.

Another notable acquisition was hotelier Henry Augustus Willard's collection of autographs of signers of the Declaration of Independence and presidents of the Continental Congress. There were also additions to the Library's holdings of the papers of Calvin Coolidge, William O. Douglas, Margaret Mead, Daniel Patrick Moynihan, L. Quincy Mumford, Reinhold Niebuhr, Vincent Price, Herbert Putnam, Donald Rumsfeld, Caspar Weinberger, Roy Wilkins, among many others.

Researchers should note that access is restricted to some of the Manuscript Division's holdings such as the W. Averell Harriman papers, materials of members of the psychoanalytical movement, and those of some of the individuals mentioned in the preceding paragraph. This is in accordance with the stipulations of the donors; the Library itself places no such restrictions on access to its collections.

Copies of the 59-page paperback, Library of Congress Acquisitions: Manuscript Division, 1985, are available free upon request from the Library of Congress, Manuscript Division, Washington, DC 20540.

Crown Prince of Spain Visits the Library

Crown Prince Felipe of Spain (left) at the Library recently, viewing the White House News Photographers' exhibit.

His Royal Highness, Prince Felipe de Borbon, crown prince of Spain, visited the Library of Congress along with 60 of his fellow cadets from the Sebastian de Elcano, the Royal Spanish Navy's training vessel.

Glen Zimmerman, Associate Librarian for Management, welcomed Prince Felipe to the Library and presented him with a copy of the book, Treasures of the Library of Congress. John R. Hébert, acting chief, Hispanic Division, and Roberta I. Shaffer, special assistant to the Law Librarian, made brief presentations on the Spanish holdings in the Library of Congress, making reference to selected rare materials that were displayed for the visitors.

Among those special items were Columbus' book of privileges (Columbus Codex, 1502); a first edition of Cervantes' Don Quixote (1605); the Spanish law code Fuero Juzgo (13th century); a manuscript map of Santa Marta, Colombia, produced at the Royal Naval School for Navigation in Cadiz (mid-18th century); printed laws governing the royal naval forces (1776); and a 1493 Papal Bull signed by Queen Isabella requesting that the indigenous people of the New World be converted to Christianity.

Following the welcoming ceremonies, Prince Felipe and his fellow cadets were escorted on Library tours, given in Spanish by staff volunteer guides, Jean Mills, Copyright Cataloging Division; Kay Elsasser, Subject

FLICC to Hold Seminar on Managing Budget Cutbacks

The Federal government began reducing spending in 1986 to meet the first cuts mandated by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings legislation. How has the Federal library and information center community managed in the interim and what does the future hold through the Gramm-Rudman target date for a balanced budget—1991?

To answer these questions and provide a forum for the discussion of other budget-related issues, the Federal Library and Information Center Committee (FLICC) is sponsoring a "Seminar on Managing Budget Cutbacks," on September 11, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the Mumford Room of the James Madison Memorial Building, Library of Congress. Attendance at the meeting is free and preregistration is not required.

The topic of the morning session is "The Budget Process: Expectations and Experiences," and will feature speakers from the Office of Management and Budget, the General Accounting Office, and the three national libraries—the Library of Congress, the National Agricultural Library, and the National Library of Medicine.

In the afternoon, a panel of four managers of Washington, D.C.-area library and information centers will discuss "How Gramm-Rudman Has Affected Operations." The speakers are: Elizabeth S. Knauff, Department of the Treasury; Patricia W. Berger, National Bureau of Standards; Joseph F. Caponio, National Technical Information Service; and Peter Imhof, Naval Research Laboratory. Edward H. Liszewski, U.S. Geological Survey, will serve as panel moderator. Mr. Liszewski is coordinating the seminar on behalf of the FLICC Education Working Group, whose program it is.

For further information on the program, contact the FLICC/FEDLINK office at (202) 287-1380.

Journals of Frederick W. Ashley Throw Light on Library's History

Herbert Putnam was Librarian of Congress for forty years. For 36 of those years Frederick W. Ashley was a Library employee, concluding his career as Putnam's Chief Assistant Librarian, the equivalent of the current position of Deputy Librarian of Congress. The Library recently received a journal-scrapbook of Ashley, apparently maintained in the later years of his Library service and in retirement. It joins a similar journal-scrapbook received in 1986. Both have come to the Library through the good offices of Ralph Henderson, former assistant chief of the Loan Division.

The journal-scrapbook received last year was evidently begun in 1913 and kept faithfully for six or seven years and sporadically thereafter. There are numerous clippings and inserts. Toward the end of the volume Ashley made a few entries concerning his early life. The additional volume, received last month, was evidently maintained in the 1930s. It is retrospective in character, however, and includes Ashley's chronologies of his early life. Although most of the entries are personal and family-oriented, there are authentic glimpses of the Library of Congress of another era.

Frederick William Ashley, for nine years Chief Assistant Librarian of the Library of Congress, was born January 12, 1863, in Mansfield, Ohio, and died in June 1943. He served the Library from 1900 to 1936, and his name is closely associated with two of the Library's most famous collections of incunabula, the John Boyd Thacher Collection, acquired in 1910, and the Otto F. Vollbehr Collection, acquired in 1930.

At the time Ashley was employed by the Library in

1900, he was studying at the New York State Library School in Albany. However, his career to that point had been a crazy-quilt of false starts, dead ends, and new opportunities, in the manner of an older, more flexible America.

At age seven he and his family moved to Fremont, Ohio, where he was educated in the public schools. He attended Fremont High School, where he wrote the class song and delivered the class oration at his commencement in 1878. His first job was teaching school for a year near his home, at 90 cents per day. In his spare time he studied Latin and Greek. The next year he entered Western Reserve Academy in Hudson, Ohio, as further preparation for college, and entered Adelbert College (now Case Western Reserve University) later in the year, after spending the summer working in a sash factory. He graduated from college in 1885, having worked his way through and written another school song, "Dear Old Reserve." A highlight of his college years was hearing a Matthew Arnold lecture in January 1884, which Ashley attended as the guest of John Hay.

He next spent a year at Yale Divinity School in New Haven, following which he was employed as a "teacher of seven subjects" at St. Charles College, St. Charles, Mo. Ashley described this as a year of "weird experiences," but he did form a friendship that year with 14-year-old Rupert Hughes, who accompanied Ashley back to Western Reserve Academy the next year. Ashley taught Latin and chemistry in the academy over the next four years. Hughes, meanwhile, went on to Adelbert College and a notable career in literature, radio, and motion pictures.

Ashley, meanwhile, left Western Reserve Academy in 1891 to enter graduate school at Harvard. A few weeks later he realized the "futility" of this step and returned to Cleveland to clerk in a book store. A few weeks later still, the principal of the academy, Newton Hobart, suffered a breakdown, and Ashley was summoned to replace him. He was married in 1893 and remained as principal of the academy until 1897.

The next year, 1898, found him studying law and taking charge of the Morley Memorial Library in Painesville, Ohio, his wife's hometown. Before the year was out, however, he was a student at New York State Library School in Albany. In 1899 then Secretary of State John Hay wrote Ashley: "You are at Liberty to make any use of my name which you may find convenient." In April 1900 Ashley was appointed to a position in the Copyright Office at a salary of $1,600. He and his growing family established residence at 524 First Street, S.E., purchasing a house at 132 S Street, N.W., the following year. The Ashleys later lived in Chevy Chase, D.C., before returning to Capitol Hill in the 1920s.

The Ashleys, after moving to Washington, generally spent a good part of their summers in Cape Cod, but in 1909 rented a farm in Gaithersburg, Md., for the summer and spent the next few vacation periods in Gaithersburg, Md., and Kensington, Md., regarded then as summer retreats, not outlying suburbs. By 1909 Ashley had become chief of the Order Division (salary: $2,500) and the following year, in the laconic words of his journal: "Went to Albany and brought the Thacher Collection to Washington." Ashley's Catalogue of the collection, the fruit of much after-hours effort, was published in 1915, the same year Librarian Herbert Putnam, with whom Ashley was sailing off the coast of Maine, offered him the position of superintendent of the Reading Room (salary: $3,000).

For the next dozen years Ashley presided over the Reading Room and its comprehensive services, an interval broken only by several absences in 1919–21 because of illnesses. The Reading Room was the nerve center of the Library then, and Ashley was at the center of the center, sometimes a vulnerable spot, as in 1923. In his own words: "Honorable Bourke Cockran sent a moron to LC for some books. The moron couldn't make clear what was wanted. Bourke raved and yelled threatening me with a showing up 'on the floor.' " However, Representative Cockran (D-N.Y.) never carried out his threat. Reason: he died the next morning before eight o'clock. Moral: draw your own!

In 1927 Ashley became Chief Assistant Librarian. Among his many accomplishments over the next nine years, the acquisition of the Vollbehr Collection in 1930 stands out. He played an important part in its acquisition and later wrote its Story (1934). In the midst of that triumph, however, a ghost from the past arose. The heirs of Mrs. John Boyd Thacher brought suit against the Library for having failed to meet its stipulated obligations at the time it acquired the collection in 1910. Ashley was on the witness stand December 15 and 21, 1931. His journal notes that Dr. Putnam, was "pleased with my evidence and manner. I kept my head." On December 22 the case was decided in the Library's favor, a verdict verified by the Court of Claims the following year.

Ashley reached the then mandatory retirement age of 70 in January 1933, but President Hoover by Executive Order 5988 exempted him from mandatory retirement. He remained at the Library three more years, but age and ill health led him to leave the Library April 1, 1936. He lived to be 80, dividing his time between family homes in Coral Gables, Fla., and Westport, Conn. He died June 14, 1943, and is buried in Westport.

The Ashley journal-scrapbooks add a personal dimension to documentation of the Library's history available to researchers in the Manuscript Division.

Application Deadline Looms for Library Parking Spaces

The Library Support Services Office (LSSO) is conducting its semiannual review of parking space assignments for passenger vehicles and motorcycles. Library employees who wish parking spaces must submit applications by 4:30 p.m., Friday, September 18.

Applicants must submit a Request for Reserved Parking Space (Form 27/55, rev. 8/86) directly to the Library Support Services Office, Room LM G03, by the deadline. Applications received after the deadline date will not be considered. Questions regarding eligibility of a carpool should be directed to the office of the chief, LSSO, ext. 77512, before the deadline.

Winton E. Matthews, Jr., Awarded Pin For 20 Years of Library Service

Winton E. Matthews, Jr., an assistant editor in the Decimal Classification Division, was presented a 20-year Federal Service Award by David Smith, division chief, on June 17, with the division's entire staff attending.

Mr. Matthews, a native of Baton Rouge, La., received bachelor's and master's degrees in library science from Louisiana State University before joining the Library's Subject Cataloging Division in 1967. One year later he transferred to the Decimal Classification Division, where he assumed increasingly responsible classifier levels before being promoted to his present position in April 1985. As an assistant editor, Mr. Matthews is part of the editorial team that maintains and develops the Dewey Decimal Classification.

Staff Activities

John C. Broderick, assistant librarian for research services, is the author of "The Poet Laureate of the United States" in the Dictionary of Literary Biography Yearbook 86 (Detroit: Gale Research, 1987). The article provides history and background of the establishment of the position and the appointment of Robert Penn Warren in February 1986.

John Y. Cole, director of the Center for the Book, is the author of "David Starr Jordan: Stanford's Tower of Strength," in the Spring 1987 issue of Imprint, published by the Associates of the Stanford University Libraries. In this biographical sketch of Stanford's first president, Dr. Cole focuses on how Jordan's attitude toward books helped shape the university and its library.

Holly Hunsberger of the American Law Division, Arthur Lieb of The Librarian's Office, and Charles Sens of the Music Division sang in a chorus that performed and recorded Modest Petrovich Mussorgksy's Boris Godunov with the National Symphony Orchestra conducted by Mstislav Rostropovich. The three are members of the Choral Arts and Oratorio Societies of Washington.

Ruggero Raimondi, Nicolai Gedda, and Galina Vishnevskaya are among the internationally known soloists performing for this recording, which will be issued commercially by Erato in 1988. The recording will be used as the soundtrack for a film, which is scheduled to open the Cannes Film Festival in 1989, and for a home video issue of the opera.

William R. Nugent, assistant director, Automated Systems Office, spoke at a conference, "Images on CD-ROM," sponsored by the Institute for Graphic Communication in Amsterdam, The Netherlands, in June. Entitled "A Page-Image Data Base on Write-Once Optical Disk," Mr. Nugent's talk was a case study of the Library of Congress' experience with its Optical Disk Pilot Program.
